It was created by writer Tom Taylor and the artistic team, including pencil maker Trevor Hairsine and inker Stefano Gaudiano. The story takes place in an alternative Earth, where a corrupted version of the anti-life equation has infected most Earth's inhabitants with a zombie-like virus. Lois Lane acts as the narrator of the series, detailing how the events unfolded in a matter of weeks. Publication History A regularly strong performer, the first issue was published in May 2019, and was ranked #1 in comic book sales for that period. [1] Issue two also sold heavily, arriving at #2 for the month of June 2019 at 152,407 units. [2] Sales fell slightly for issue three, reaching #3 in July 2019 to 132,072 units.[3] with a further decline in August for issue four (to about 120,000 units). [4] Expanded Material DCEased: A Good Day to Die #1 DCEased: Unkillables #1-3 DCEased: Hope at World's End #1-14 DCEased: Dead Planet #1-7 Plot In the aftermath of a battle between the Justice League and the forces of Apokolips Darkseid Earth and Batman discovers that Cyborg is being held onOko Aplips. He is tortured by DeSaad, who reveals that the anti-life equation lived in his body In order for Cyborg to survive the extraction, the Black Racer is summoned. However, this causes the equation to become corrupt, and Cyborg is sent back to Earth to prevent the virus from spreading. This action also comes however, as Darkseid is driven mad by corruption and throws himself into the core of Apokolips, destroying himself and the planet in the process. Cyborg is sent to Metropolis, where the virus clings to the Internet and begins to infect people with a techno-organic viral version of the equation. This causes violent transformations, turning them into a zombie-like state. Superman is reunited with Lois Lane, his son Jonathan and a visiting Damian Wayne, destroying all the screens in their apartment to prevent infection. In the Batcave, the Batcomputer's firewall prevents Bruce from becoming infected, but it's too late to stop Nightwing and Red Robin's infection fighting Batman as he tells Alfred Pennyworth to run. In the Atlantic Ocean, Aquaman is invaded by a mob and infected. In Metropolis, Lois Lane creates a shelter on the roof of the Daily Planet. While in Gotham, Harley Quinn unknowingly confronts an infected Joker. In the middle of a camping trip, Hal Jordan is infected with the virus after looking at his phone, leaving Oliver Queen and Dinah Drake to fend him off. After being killed by Drake's Canary Cry, she is chosen to become the new Green Lantern before Superman takes them both to the Daily Planet. Damian comes into contact with his father, who killed his two former acolytes and became infected. Using one of Mr. Freeze's costumes to slow down the transformation, he tells his friends everything he's discovered. He starts spinning, and is killed by Alfred. Alfred drives the Batplane to Gotham City and shoots the infected below. Harley Quinn, running away, kills the Joker. Before escaping, she is confronted with infected birds of prey. In Atlantis, Mera and Tempest are interrupted by the infected Aquaman and his army of sea creatures. While Mera escapes, Tempest is infected. In Metropolis, Superman saves most of the Daily Planet's staff, before leaving Green Arrow and Dinah to protect his family. Back in Smallville, he finds that Martha is safe and takes her back to Metropolis, but is forced to leave her infected father behind. In Washington, D.C., Captain Atom began purging infected people from the street, on the orders of Amanda Waller, but did not know that an infected Ray Palmer was inside his body. In Gotham, Poison Ivy kills birds of prey before they can infect Quinn. In Metropolis, Superman and Dinah take to the streets to find other survivors, while Lois begins to spread a message via analog forms of communication. An infected Giganta besieged the Daily Planet, only to be run over by Superman. Wonder Woman arrives and argues with Superman about whether or not to kill the infected. Before they can agree, Giganta's head is opened by Cyborg. Back on the roof, Alfred arrives giving Damian a Batsuit. Cyborg then reveals the real infected, they are just an extension of the anti-life equation. Suddenly, Hawkgirl collapses from the sky. She informs Superman Superman Captain Atom is about to self-immolate. Clark and Wonder Woman seize Atom, and proceed to make him fly in the upper atmosphere, but they are too late and it explodes, wiping away a number of major cities, including Metropolis with the only survivors saved by the Ring Shield of Dinah. Superman and Wonder Woman also survived and are approached by Lex Luthor, offering a truce with the heroes. A week later, Gotham became a jungle ruled by Ivy and Quinn. Within weeks, the Internet was disabled around the world, and safe havens were set up in Gotham, Themyscira and the Fortress of Loneliness. While Luthor and Cyborg insist that the planet be abandoned using the newly built Arches, Superman is adamant that he will not leave. The heroes are blinded by the infected Martian Manhunter, who kills Luthor and infects The Flash. Superman faces Flash's infected head on as he runs, he kills the Flash, but becomes infected. Leaving the space to commit suicide, before he can deprive himself of oxygen, he begins to transform. As the infected Superman rampages, the evacuation to the Arches begins. Wonder Woman makes a kryptonite-encrusted sword, and goes with Cyborg and Dinah to kill Superman. While most shelters are evacuated, Quinn and Ivy remain to care for the remaining survivors. During the evacuation of Themyscira, Aquaman reappears from the ocean with a Kraken and his infected army, only to be killed by Green Arrow. Wonder Woman, Dinah and Cyborg take on Superman. As they appear to gain the upper hand, Superman fatally wounds Diana before flying into space to destroy the Arches. Jonathan confronts his father and collides with him, knocking himself out. In the following moments, the Green Lantern Corps appears to be providing reinforcements. Realizing that he is outdone, Superman decides to destroy the solar system by feeding on the Sun's energy. On Earth, Cyborg uses the Lasso of Truth to interrogate a now infected Wonder Woman about the cure. The equation speaks through it, claiming that Cyborg himself is the cure. While he's distracted from finding the Arches, Wonder Woman beheads him. The story ends with Lois, safe on the Ark with a newly awakened Jonathan, claiming that the monsters are now behind them and that it is time for a fresh start. Spin-offs A Good Day to Die Mister Miracle and Big Barda investigate the destruction of Apokolips before Boom Tubing returns to earth. Meanwhile, Mister Terrific examines an infected Boomerang captain and realizes that he needs to trace the origin of the virus. He goes to Mister Miracle's apartment to help him visit Apokolips, only to be informed of his annihilation. Looking for another Terrific solution, Miracle and Big Barda track down Blue Beetle and Booster Gold transport to England. In Liverpool, John Constantine escapes from a crowd of infected people only to discover that his longtime companion Chas has turned. Using his magic, he burns Chas before escaping the crowd and crashing. He's awake Mr. Terrific and his group who seek Constantine's help to find a magic solution to the infection. Constantine says that there is no cure and refuses to help the heroes, teleporting. With the technological and magical options expired, Mister Terrific theorizes that the only hope for humanity is for Booster Gold to use his time machine. Traveling to Malibu, they are attacked by an infected fire and ice. Mister Miracle and Big Barda battle the duo to give the other heroes time to find the machine, but they succumb to the crowd of infected. Booster Gold and Blue Beetle locate the time machine, but are prevented from using it by Waverider. In the Oblivion Bar, John Constantine laments the current situation to Inspector Chimp before deciding that it is time to be a hero. He teleports to the time machine where he hits Waverider. Before the heroes can use the machine, an infected Big Barda breaks and rips Mister Terrific in half. While the heroes try to get Booster Gold to the time machine, Booster feels strange and flashes out of existence leaving Big Barda to attack Blue Beetle. Constantine argues with Waverider for choosing this as the calendar to record. Annoyed by his interference, Constantine binds himself to Waverider, preventing him from entering the temporal flow and leading to his death by the now infected Blue Beetle. As Constantine prepares for his own death, Dr. Fate and Zatanna arrive and save him. Unkillables Deathstroke encounters infected neo-Nazis during a job in Kentucky, soon becoming one of the infected after trying to contact his client with his phone, however, a day later, his healing factor purges the equation of his system and returns him to normal. Deathstroke's daughter, Rose Wilson, is stuck in her apartment, not wanting to leave like all her visions of her end of trial in her death. Deathstroke arrives with a helicopter to extract Rose from the roof only so that it is destroyed by an infected man-bat, however, they are soon found by Mirror Master who takes them to Vandal Savage at Ball's Pyramid. Savage reveals that he also recovered Bane, Captain Cold, Cheetah, Creeper, Deadshot, Lady Shiva and Solomon Grundy to create a team of Inkillables (nicknamed Tree Lobster by Creeper because of a Savage analogy used) in order to inherit what is left of Earth. Jason Todd arrives at the Batcave after Alfred has already left, find Ace the Bat-Hound and to his surprise the corpses of Batman, Nightwing, and Red Robin. After burying them Jason and Ace set off in the Batmobile and rescue the last two living members of the Bat family still in Gotham, Cassandra Cain and Jim Gordon; after doing this and confirming the death of Barbara Gordon to a devastated Jim, they leave Gotham. The Bat arrives in Bludhaven the next day, discovering a closed orphanage containing surviving orphans that they choose to stay and protect. Hope at World's End An anthology series featuring stories of various heroes. Jimmy Olsen saves of his colleagues in the initial outbreak of the virus and documents the actions of heroes throughout the DCEased event. A leap in time foreshadows the arrival of an anti-life army. In Kahndaq, Black Adam stops the initial spread of the virus by killing all infected citizens. Martian Manhunter recruits Superman and Wonder Woman to ask Black Adam to open Kahndaq's borders, but he refuses. Adam visits Kahndaq but is attacked by an infected boy. As he tries to shout Shazam! the boy claws to his face, and he turns into a turned black Adam. In Keystone City, Wally West, Max Mercury, Impulse and Jesse Quick are evacuating une infected residents to another Earth. As they succeed Max becomes infected. Before he can turn Wally short with him so he can join the Speed Force. Dead Planet Set sequel five years after the original miniseries, Dead Planet follows the New Justice League as they return to an Earth now overrun by anti-life in search of Cyborg, who managed to activate a distress beacon in his head (secretly installed by Batman) to convey a message in Morse code. As a group of heroes return to Earth to respond to the signal, they are attacked by Wonder Woman, who infects Green Arrow before Jonathan can talk with Cyborg and confirms that there is a cure for the infection. Collected Editions DCEased's first collection was a limited edition Hardcover of 1,400 copies published for Local Comic Book Day 2019 with a cover with an infected Joker. The hardcover mass market collection was released on November 26, 2019 with Batman on the cover, while an exclusive Barnes and Noble variant features a Superman cover and a bonus cover gallery. Each edition brings together the original six editions of the mini-series DCEased and DCEased: A Good Day to Die oneshot. Critical Reception This section needs expansion.
